A thinner sock is often chosen when the skate already fits snugly and precisely, and the goal is to minimize the amount of material between the foot and the skate. This can be particularly appealing to club players who deliberately fine-tune their skating feel and don't want unnecessary padding in their gear. This model is also an easy choice for parents of young players looking for a simple, functional sock for everyday hockey use.

When it comes to hockey socks, it's worth coordinating them with your usual skate fit to ensure the thin design sits in the skate as intended.
