In hockey, in particular, intense physical exertion is often followed the very next day by another ice session, indoor practice, or strength training session. In this context, a well-designed recovery supplement is more than just an add-on. The combination of protein building blocks, creatine, carbohydrates, and electrolytes addresses multiple aspects of recovery simultaneously, making it a good fit for a structured daily sports routine with regular training and games.

For those who want to maintain a consistent level of performance in team training and avoid unnecessary gaps in recovery between sessions, this product offers a formulation clearly designed for use after physical exertion.
