For club players in particular, the balance of length, stiffness, and bend is crucial, as it directly affects shot feel, puck control, and timing. The 85 stiffness rating is designed for players who prefer a noticeably stiffer flex or who play with a bit more power. The 63-inch length is suitable for the senior category and provides a familiar foundation on the ice for passing, carrying the puck, and shooting. With a right-handed blade orientation and W03 flex, this NOVIUM is designed with a clear, familiar stick geometry—the kind many players specifically choose for their daily training.

The most important factors to consider when selecting a stick are blade orientation, flex, and length, so that the stick matches your own playing style and the equipment you're used to.
