In goal, it's not just about size—it's also about how well the leg pads integrate with the rest of your gear. An INT model in 31 inches + 2 inches is often preferred when an adult youth or more compact intermediate fit better suits a player's movement patterns than a larger senior size. This is particularly noticeable during the butterfly save, when shifting across the goal line, and during quick changes of direction.

An important factor in the selection process is ensuring the right fit based on body height, leg length, and the rest of the goalie's setup.
