Especially for young players, it's important to have gear that works seamlessly during games and integrates smoothly with existing hockey equipment. Overpants like these complement protective gear effectively without compromising the typical range of motion required in hockey. This is particularly useful for junior players in their day-to-day club life, when practices, games, and gear changes follow one another in quick succession. It also makes it easier for parents to understand that these are outer hockey pants designed to be worn over protective gear.

For a proper fit, the size should match the rest of the junior player's equipment and the protective gear being worn.
