A face guard of this design is often chosen when an unobstructed view forward and to the sides is important, without sacrificing the sturdy basic construction of a full-face guard. The double-bar design features striking lines and is particularly well-suited for players who deliberately tailor their equipment to their position and playing style. Especially in everyday club play, when helmets and face guards are used regularly, a clear and proven design is often the obvious choice.

Before purchasing, briefly check whether the shape and mounting system are compatible with your existing helmet.
