It's especially during training and in intense game situations that the importance of the balance between protection and mobility becomes clear. The tapered shape fits closer to the hand without making handling feel unnecessarily stiff. Add to that the flexible cuff and the movable thumb, which provide noticeably more freedom when handling the stick, passing, and shooting. At the same time, the construction—featuring EPP foam and PE inserts—is clearly designed for regular hockey use.

When it comes to junior gloves, it's worth taking a close look at the right length to ensure that the protective coverage and range of motion work well together.
