Protection size-1: SR

CCM TACKS XR 80 SR shoulder pads are designed for senior players who are looking for flat, flexible shoulder protection during practice and games, without adding unnecessary bulk to the key protective areas. The design stays close to the body and promotes a feeling of freedom of movement, which is especially important during regular ice time.

- Technology: Flat, injection-molded JDP shoulder caps with foam padding
- Construction: Two-layer front with PE foam and sublimated comfort lining
- Back construction: Compression-molded front and back panels with a one-piece back base
- Spinal protection: PE protection in the back area
- Range of motion: Game-ready, form-fitting design with good mobility
- IntendedUse: Competitive ice hockey
- Sizes: Senior in S, M, L, and XL

In everyday hockey, it's not just about coverage—it's also about how smoothly and naturally a shoulder pad moves with you while skating, in physical play, and during stick handling. That's exactly where this model excels: The JDP shoulder pads help redirect impact forces away from the shoulders, while the flat construction under the jersey remains comfortably compact. Together with the contoured front and back panels, this creates a protective package that stays flexible on the ice and fits well for club players with a regular training schedule.

For optimal protection, the senior size should be chosen so that the shoulder pads and back panel fit correctly without restricting arm movement.
