When it comes to straps, a small detail often makes all the difference in everyday use: The contact between your hand and the pole should remain reliable without having to readjust with every push-off. That's exactly where this XC Fusion model comes in. For club athletes and ambitious recreational runners who log many kilometers in the winter, a well-balanced strap system is essential to ensure that power transfer stays in rhythm and the pole can be guided with control even during longer sessions. The orange version is clearly recognizable as part of the Exel XC Fusion line.

It's important to ensure proper compatibility with your existing Exel XC Fusion system and to select size S.
