It's especially during intense training sessions that you quickly realize how important it is to have a grip tape that doesn't get slippery too soon. This model is designed for situations where the shaft gets wetter, yet you still need to maintain precise stick control. This is particularly relevant for club players who train regularly and want to rely on a consistent grip when passing, dribbling, and taking quick shots. Even when simply refreshing your stick, the right grip tape is often the quickest way to improve handling confidence.

Before replacing it, it's worth taking a quick look at how the existing grip feels to ensure its thickness and grip characteristics match your stick setup.
